be shipped. There was one that got his eye immediately, and reaching for the tag he discovered that it was about to be shipped to Cleveland for the famous Lajoie.

Jones communicated his desire to Kelly to pinch the bat and told the manager of the team to get the owner of the factory busy and he would be the trick. Going to another part of the shop, Jones picked up a "Lajoie model" and told the proprietor that he wanted to buy. Then Kelly got the bat-making genius down to the other end of the shop and while they were talking business Jones slipped the pet out of the bundle of three, substituted the one he intended to buy and got away with the deal.

The bat made the reputation of Jones as a bat-slinger. That same afternoon he tried it against the Louisville team. The first time up he got stung in the back and did not get a chance. The next time he was there for revenge, and as one to his liking floated over the pan he shut his eye and clouted it a fearful welt. The ball just cleared the shortstop's hands and bounced off the left field. George Tebeau said that he never saw a ball hit so hard in his life.

Jones got two hits in that game, and he made two hits in every game for the next sixteen that he played. He earned the nickname of "Two-hit Jones," and before long had an average of .320. Kelly was off in his feed about this time and found the chunk of horsehide as elusive as a snowflake in a thirty-mile gale. Jones introduced him to the new bat and Kelly tried it. In a short time he was hitting at a 314 clip, and neither of these men used any other bat after that. This is the reason Kelly takes the stick out of his hiding place every day during the winter season.

oil bath. He is sure that he will hit a .400 clip with it next season.

It isn't every man who gets a chance to read his own obituary. George La Blanche, who reached fame's pinnacle on Jack Dempsey, picked up a paper at Bangor, Me., the other day and read in an Ottawa (Can.) despatch the story that his dead body had been

A WOMAN TO BE PRETTY
Must Have Luxuriant and Glossy Hair, No Matter What Color.
The finest contour of a female face, the sweetest smile of a female mouth, loses something if the head is crowned with scant hair. Scant and falling hair, it is now known, is caused by a parasite that burrows into the scalp to the root of the hair, where it scales the vitality. The little white scales are called dandruff. To cure dandruff permanently, then, and to stop falling hair, that germ must be killed. Newbro's Herpicide, an entirely new result of the chemical laboratory, destroys the dandruff germ, and, of course, stops the falling hair, and prevents baldness. Sold by leading druggists. For sale by W. A. D'Alemberte, druggist and apothecary, 121 S. Palafox. Send 10 cents in stamps for sample to The Herpicide Company, Detroit, Mich.

A Good Bat Story.
One day during last season, when the St. Paul team was in Louisville for a series of games, Jones and Kelly went to the bat factory to see if they could discover some new bats. In wandering around the factory Jones spied a bundle of three bats ready to found in a California swamp. Just how such a yarn should reach Canada without hitting at some other point along the route from the Golden state is as mysterious as great as a Conan Doyle plot.—Ren Mulford, in Post.

Talking of Fitz and Sullivan and Corbett, brings up an old story, but one that is little known.

Fitzsimmons was one of the first to see that Sullivan was in his decline. Fitz at that time was coming fast. He knew that he could whip Sullivan and become champion of the world, if he could get a chance. Fitz challenged, but Sullivan ignored him. Again Fitz published his defiance. Sullivan simply expressed his contempt for all middleweights, and gave Corbett the covert chance. That was the real beginning of the bad blood between Corbett and Fitzsimmons. But it amounted to the same thing in the end, or perhaps a little better for Fitz, for he had the credit of whipping a champion at the height of his career, not the decline.—Bob Edgren, in N. Y. World.

At a meeting held in Chicago Sunday the representatives of three Class A minor leagues pledged themselves to an agreement by which leagues in lower classes shall have only the same number of votes in the affairs of the National association as the five leagues in class A. The leading minors are the American association, the Southern league, the Eastern league, the Pacific Coast league and the Western league. The last three named have gone into the agreement for reducing the vote of the lower-class minors and it is expected that the American association and the Southern league will follow suit. If they do, it means that the little fellows must knuckle down to the big five or there will be a break in the National association, through which the little minors will be made the subjects of raids that will prove costly, if not fatal, to them. This is the same scheme that was hatched about two years ago, but died as soon as it came out of the shell. The big minors believe now that they can carry the scheme through and it needs only the sanction of the American association, which has taken the matter under advisement, to make the law a fact.—Cincinnati Times-Star.

"Mike Kelly did a funny thing in a game at Boston that season," says "Port" Anson. "He hit reached second base on a hit and an out and was prancing around on the line when a red-hot cinder from a passing locomotive got in the umpire's eye, and yelling with pain, he called 'Time.' Kelly was the first man to reach the umpire's side, and a few seconds later he had deftly extracted the cinder from the arbitrator's eye and the game was resumed.

"But just then the Boston bunch set up a noisy protest about something and looking up to see what it was all about, we saw Kelly was on third instead of second.

"Here, Kel, how did you get over there? shouted the umpire.

"Come over on that same whiff of smoke that most put your eye out," said Kelly. A long wrangle followed, but the umpire—probably feeling grateful to Kel for his medical science—allowed the extra base, which Mike had merely purloined during the mix-up, and a little later a long fly brought Kelly home with the winning run."—Exchange.

Gives Health, Vigor and Tone.
Herbine is a boon for sufferers from anaemia. By its use the blood is quickly regenerated and the color becomes normal. The drooping strength is diminished. Health, vigor and tone predominate. New life and happy activity results. Mrs. Belle H. Chirel, Middlesborough, Ill., writes: "I have been troubled with liver complaint and poor blood, and have found nothing to benefit me like Herbine. I hope never to be without it. I have wished I had known of it in my husband's lifetime." 50c. Sold by all druggists.
